Jackson, Mississippi

Randy Douglas received a Bachelor of Science Degree in Social Science with a History Concentration, and a Minor in Political Science from Thomas Edison State College. In 2009, Randy received a Mississippi Department of Education teaching certification in Social Studies. Over the course of Randy's education career, he has taught Mississippi Studies, World Geography and Science. Randy has edited and proofread curriculum materials and was an online editor for a graphic design company. Currently, he is the curriculum designer for online students at New Learning Resources Online. In addition, Randy assigns online student exams, evaluates transcripts and maintains communication with students and Job Corp Instructors. He also serves as a Social Studies subject specialist to assist NLRO students with questions concerning the curriculum. When Randy is not working, he is spending time with his wife, Autumn and his 21 month old son, Riley.

Randy's favorite saying is "If not you, then who?"
